

CT Learns and Works Breakfast is April 25 at Three Rivers Community College in Norwich

WETHERSFIELD, April 20, 2018 – CT Learns and Works, the annual conference aimed at educators, counselors, employment, and training specialists, and business persons interested in career and workforce development issues, returns on April 25 in Norwich with a new format emphasizing increased community outreach.

The Norwich symposium, the first of four-in-a series, will take place at Three Rivers Community College, located at 574 New London Turnpike, Norwich, and run from 8 to 11:45 a.m.

“The purpose of CT Learns and Works is to bring educators and employers together to share their knowledge about what is needed and is being offered in terms of an educated workforce, and to foster opportunities within a local area or region,” explains Stephen Dombrowski, chair of the CT Learns and Works Conference. “The symposiums are designed to help members of our audience dialogue with one another at a local level. We will share Labor Market Information, industry representatives and employers will hold panel discussions, talk about occupational needs from a skill set point, and address soft skill application along with career pathways being offered in technical education.”

The CT Learns and Works Breakfast Symposium series is sponsored by the Connecticut Department of Education, the Connecticut Department of Labor, Connecticut Career Network, Connecticut State University System, Connecticut State Board of Regents and Eversource.

The other CT Learns and Works Conferences will be held at Post University in Waterbury on May 10, Goodwin College in East Hartford on May 18, and Northwest Community College in Winsted on September 27. The Waterbury and East Hartford symposiums will also run from 8 to 11:45 a.m. The time for the Winsted event has yet to be finalized.
