TAA Coordination of Benefits

Per §618.625 of the Trade Act, if a State estimates that it will exceed all available TAA Program training funds then the State must seek funding from other sources (other than from trade-affected workers), including WIOA national dislocated worker grants to cover the costs of training approved. To the extent that a State is unable to fund training costs from those other sources, the agency may approve training where the worker pays those unfunded costs. Where the worker chooses to pay those unfunded costs under this paragraph (d)(2)(ii), the State is not liable for paying those costs and must document this prearrangement in the worker's case file. Where the worker chooses not to pay the unfunded costs, the State must waive the training requirement on the basis that training is not available, in order to preserve any remaining Basic TRA eligibility.

If the individual chooses to use financial aid to cover those unfunded costs, a representative of the training institution needs to provide the following information for the individual seeking TAA training approval. A worker eligible for financial aid may also use those funds for income support during training if UI/TRA payments are not sufficient to do so, or to support themselves during training as they see fit.
